Building Relationships

On Thursday 7 August, Camden Council held its first Home Builders Forum aimed at providing an opportunity for members of the home building industry to discuss issues of relevance, share information and ultimately build strong professional relationships with Camden Council.

Mayor of Camden, Councillor Lara Symkowiak said Council was committed to focusing on service delivery to our customers.

“Following a recent restructure at Council, which came into effect on 1 August 2014, Council has placed a significant emphasis on service delivery to our customers. We want to minimise red tape, streamline processes, make business easier for our customers, respond to their needs and ultimately get it right”.

“We are one of the fastest growing Council’s in NSW with approximately 110 new residents every week and our local home builders are working tirelessly to build new homes for new and existing families in the Camden Local Government Area. We want to help make this process quicker and easier for local home builders and this forum was the perfect way to hear their thoughts, suggestions and opinions – all of which were taken on board”.

Information on Council’s development services and initiatives as well as information on a number of systems currently underway to review practices and implement improvements across Council were also discussed.

Council will be hosting a Developers forum in the coming months aimed at providing updates on Council’s projects and initiatives and discuss topics of interest.
