Camden Shorts showcases young performers

The exceptional talents of Camden's young people will be showcased at this year's Camden Shorts at 7pm, Friday 23 June.

The event will include 14 live performances in music, dance and theatre by people aged 12-25 years at the Macarthur Auditorium in the Camden Civic Centre.

"This event supports emerging young artists and reveals some of the fantastic raw talent in our community, making it an exciting night for everyone involved," said Deputy Mayor, Theresa Fedeli.

"Council is proud to host the event as a way to support our creative young people and help them to reach their potential," Cr Fedeli said.

The live performances will include original and popular works by individuals and groups including contemporary dances, comedy, music and improvisational theatre.

High profile local musician, Luke Koteris will make a special guest appearance and share his musical journey and inspiration with the young people and perform for the audience.

Entry is free and tickets are available for purchase and www.stickytickets.com.au.
