Free family fun at Camden Play Day

Families can enjoy a fun day of free entertainment when Council hosts the annual Camden Play Day for Families event this weekend.

Featuring a special appearance from Batman, as well as performances by local children's groups; jumping castles; face painting; craft and more, the event is sure to keep kids busy, and will celebrate National Families Week (May 15-21).

Mayor Lara Symkowiak said the event was in its 8th year and had proven itself popular with both children and parents.

"We host Camden Play Day for Families to bring members of our community together, and to help families interact and connect with local service providers," Cr Symkowiak said.

"There will be plenty on offer and we hope everyone takes full advantage of the day," she said.

Children attending the event can meet Binyang the Bookasaurus, and take part in reading and craft activities at the Paint the Town REaD tent.

Another crowd favourite will also return this year, as kids will be able to get up and close with Council's waste trucks, and learn how to use controls to pick up garbage bins.

Camden Play Day for Families will be held 11am-2pm, Sunday 20 May at Kirkham Park, Camden Valley Way, Elderslie.
